Brexit

In 2013 David Cameron, who was Prime Minister at the time, promised to let the British people decide whether they want to stay in the EU or not. This type of vote is a referendum - letting the people decide on an area of politics. This was given the name @Brexit@. Both a Leave campaign and Remain campaign followed. Both sides had strong views on whether the UK should remain as part of or leave the EU.

Soft Brexit

It would keep the UK closely aligned with the EU. The UK could gain special access to the single market but might have to, in return, compromise on immigration agreements.

Hard Brexit

It essentially means taking the UK completely out of the EU – including both the single market and the customs union, so it is free from its regulations and tariffs.

It would give the UK more control over its borders and immigration.
